BIO

Peter Moskos was born in Chicago, graduated from Evanston Township High School, and lives in New York City in Astoria, Queens. He has worked as a movie theater usher, a Chicago Cubs usher, waiter, cook, bartender, bar manager, theater technician (lights and sound), boat captain, busboy, police officer, and professor.

While enrolled as a Harvard University graduate student, Moskos worked as a Baltimore City police officer from 1999 to 2001. He patrolled midnight shift in Baltimore's high-crime Eastern District.

Cop in the Hood (Princeton University Press, 2008), Moskos's first book, examines policing from a first-hand police perspective, focusing on the failure of the drug war and its impact on police culture and arrest decision in the ghetto. Cop in the Hood won the 2008 PROSE award for best book in Sociology.

Moskos's second book is In Defense of Flogging (Basic Books, 2011).
